Highlights:

A major venue for the 2011 Summer Universiade (26 届世界大学生夏季运动), this 30.74 hectare mega complex is scheduled for completion in March 2011. The main stadium has a long-span steel roof structure (nicknamed Spring Silkworm 春茧) composed of lattice diagrid steel thin shells that cover an area of 500m x 240m. The diagrid is formed by stitching numerous "bend-and-twist" 700mm x 450mm box sections, the work demanding shop fabrication and on-site erection with a high degree of precision. The spectacular roof structure has just been placed in position.
